TRR & ADM TO END JUNE 30

Week 2 & 3 of EBA bargaining:

27 May 2021

Bargaining for EBA10 continued over the past two weeks with meetings focussed on matters pertaining to retail, delivery and contact centres.

Robust talks progressed with discussions focussing on employment arrangements, start times and rostering arrangements including access to overtime and reduced attendance rostering, access to leave entitlements, workplace flexibility, the use of contractors and superannuation.

Lengthy discussion ensued around the ceasing of the Most Monumental Blunder in the History of Australia Post, the Alternate Delivery Model (ADM), what a future delivery model should look like, and how it would be developed. A future delivery model means a new way forward – great. But what is critically important at this stage is determining what kind of role our Members can and have to play in that important process.

Getting a new model right is crucial for Members across the entire organisation. In addition to our posties responsible for the last mile, our Members across vans, transport and processing are all impacted by service standards and depend on an appropriate model to maintain their take-home pay levels and shift entitlements and our Members in retail and the contact centres are the ones who feel the brunt of the public's anger when bad management decisions are made that affect the services you're required to provide.

Such significant workplace change, particularly one that affects service delivery, job quality, take-home pay and workers' health and mental wellbeing, should never again be allowed to occur and this can only happen with the genuine involvement of Members.

Early indications are that Australia Post is indeed genuine about engaging with our Members to develop a new way forward that delivers for the public and CWU Members. And today, Australia Post took that position publicly – writing to employees confirming temporary relief measures, including the ADM, would not continue past June 30.

This is an incredibly positive step in response to our bargaining claim for an end to ADM.

It is now crucial to get the consultative framework right, to determine what the delivery model looks like going forward. In our view, EBA10 can simply not be finalised without this forming part of the overall EBA10 package. And from Members feedback, such a process would only be acceptable to Members if it were guided by the following fundamental principles:

- One run-One postie, delivering all articles five days per week;
- The ongoing maintenance of traditional take-home pay components, such as penalty rates;
- Restoring entitlements and benefits lost across all workforce areas impacted by the temporary reform and COVID-19 changes; and
- Sufficient resourcing, modelled around quality permanent jobs – and where the work offering can efficiently be modelled around full-time employment, this should always be the preferred method of engagement.
- Re-Opening those Corporate Post Offices that are still closed.

Talks will continue on what exactly will happen in the short-term, post-June 30, and how the consultative process will be established to work through a new permanent model with genuine input from Members who have to make the new model work.

We'll keep Members up to date as the bargaining process continues. Make sure you log on to our dedicated campaign website at www.eba10.com.au and register your email address with your State Branch Office to ensure you receive important EBA updates as soon as they're available.

In finishing up this Members bulletin I would personally like to take this opportunity to thank all those very, very brave Members who got involved in the campaign to bring ADM to an end.

Without Members involvement who knows where management would have taken delivery.

THANK YOU

Also please see below link that will take Members to a copy of the report from the Senate Inquiry into Australia Post.
